

Brand-Name Drugs with Generics

What is a Generic Drug?

A generic drug is a drug that's identical to its brand-name counterpart in dosage, safety, strength, quality and the way it's used and the condition it's used to treat. Generics become available when patents expire on brand-name drugs.

The color and shape of a generic drug may be different from its brand-name counterpart, but the FDA requires their active ingredients be the same. To learn more about generic drugs, talk to your doctor or pharmacist.

Generics Can Help You Save Money!

If you want to save the most on your prescription drug costs, we encourage you to consider generic drugs. There are generics available to treat many conditions and many people find them to be a good choice. In fact, nearly eight out of every 10 prescriptions are now filled with generics. Ask your doctor if generics are right for you.

Why Do Generics Cost Less?

Drugs are first marketed by their brand names, which are protected by patents for up to 20 years. Until the patents expire, no other companies can produce the generic equivalents — so the cost to you and other consumers is higher. When a drug's patent expires, other companies can produce the same drug, creating competition. The only difference may be the color or shape of the drug — and the price.

When you use a generic medication, you will always pay the lower of the cost, our special discounted price or your plan's generic copayment or coinsurance.

Are Generics Safe?

Yes. The FDA requires that all drugs be safe and effective. Since generics use the same active ingredients and are shown to work the same way in the body, they have the same risks and benefits as their brand-name counterparts.

The FDA approves all generics and holds them to the same high-safety standards as brand-name drugs.

Which Brand-Name Drugs Have Generics Available?

See the list of brand-name drugs and their generic versions below. The brand-name drugs are listed first. Their generic versions are listed in parentheses.

Is There a Generic for Me?

Most likely. There are generics available to treat many conditions and many commonly prescribed drugs have generic versions. In fact, nearly eight out of every 10 prescriptions are now filled with generics. Ask your doctor if generics are right for you!
